

Contribution ID: 14

Type: Invited Talk

IceCube: Neutrinos and Multimessenger Astronomy

The field of high-energy neutrino astronomy is undergoing a rapid evolution. After the discovery of a diffuse flux of astrophysical TeV-PeV neutrinos in 2013, the IceCube observatory has recently found first compelling evidence for neutrino emission from blazars. In this brief review, I will summarize the status of these neutrino observations and highlight the strong role of multi-messenger astronomy for their interpretation.

Author: AHLERS, Markus (NBI)

Presenter: AHLERS, Markus (NBI)